NARRATIVE DESCRIPTION

The Ralph Pryor House (1928) is located at 263 South Pershing in the College Hill neighborhood. It is situated on the west side of Pershing with the main entrance facing east. The Colonial Revival-style house, a prevalent house style in the College Hill neighborhood, was designed and built by Morris and Son Realtors. Built in a rectangular plan, this brick side-gabled house is two stories tall with end wall chimneys. The north chimney still retains an iron "P" attached to the upper flue. It is five bays wide with a central entrance. The windows are six-over-one wood sash with cast stone lug sills. Block modillions accentuate the deep eave of the roof. The roof is French interlocking red tile with open gutters built in as part of the eave terminating at the gable ends in a cornice return. It has a contributing one-story brick garage with the same window, eave and roof details as the main structure. Both brick structures feature a running bond pattern.

East (Front) Elevation

The main elevation of the Pryor House is symmetrical with the center bay containing the front door in the first story and a window to light the interior main stair. All windows have decorative shutters on the east elevation. The center bay one-story entrance is accentuated by solid side panels with single stained leaded glass panels and a solid molded fan light above the panel door. The front door has six panels with the top two panels being glazed. An entablature supported by four Doric pilasters comprises the door surround. The central window in the second story has a segmented arch hood and breaks the symmetry by being situated lower in the second story wall plane.

South Elevation

The south wall contains four shuttered windows – two in each story – centered on either side of the end wall chimney. The projecting chimney flue has six-light, quarter-arched windows on either side in the gable end. The quarter-arched windows do not have shutters.

West (Rear) Elevation

The fenestration of the west elevation is asymmetrical with seven openings on the first floor and six on the second floor. None of the windows have shutters. The second opening from the north end of the house contains a back door that opens into the library. The remaining six-over-one windows are located in conjunction with interior use in the first floor. The second floor windows are two sizes. The windows in the first, second, fifth and sixth openings are the same size as those in the first floor. The third and fourth windows are smaller and provide light for the master and second bathrooms. A shed ventilation dormer was added in the roof to accommodate an attic fan.

North Elevation

The north wall contains four shuttered windows – two in each story – centered on either side of the end wall chimney and a door in the first floor that provides entrance to the kitchen. The projecting chimney flue has six-light, quarter-arched windows on either side in the gable end. The quarter-arched windows do not have shutters.

Interior

The front door opens into a vestibule with a half-bath on the left and a doorway that opens into a stairway that leads down to the basement. A short flight of stairs leads up to the main floor from the foyer. The living room is situated at the south end of the house that is accessed through an arched opening from the main floor landing. Another arched opening with swinging doors leads into the dining room. A small library is situated at the north end of the dining room. An interior hallway provides access between the kitchen and dining room. The back stairway opens into the hall where a small pantry is located and then flows into the kitchen. Other character-defining features on the first floor include original hardwood floors; unpainted baseboard, door and window trim; and wood covers on the radiators. The kitchen floor is carpeted.

The dog-leg staircase is an open string with turned balustrade, newel and railing posts. The second floor has four bedrooms and two baths that open onto a wide central hall with paneled doors and original hardware. There is a built-in linen closet with drawers at the south end of the hallway. The floors are carpeted and the trim work and doors in the hall are varnished wood. The bedrooms and bathrooms have painted trim work. A second staircase at the south end of the hall leads down to the kitchen area.

The basement has been finished with carpeted floors, built-in bookshelves and serves as an informal family room. The basement can be accessed from the kitchen or the front vestibule.

Garage (1928, contributing)

The two-car garage is a front-gabled, one-story brick structure. The garage is situated on the northwest corner of the property with the driveway along the north end of the house. The two-car garage door faces the street. The garage has French interlocking roof tile with open gutters built in as part of the eave terminating at the gable ends in a cornice return. The windows are six-over-one wood sash.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Pryor House, built in 1928, is being nominated under Criterion A in the area of Community Planning and Development, and Criterion C in the area of Architecture because it is an excellent example of the Colonial Revival style that was popular in the United States from 1890 through 1940. The house represents the work of prominent Wichita real estate developers and builders, Walter Morris (1860-1951) and William Morris (1892-1963). The Pryor House is also eligible for listing under the "Residential Resources of Wichita 1870-1957" MPS. The house is located in the Lincoln Heights Addition in the College Hill neighborhood.

Community Planning and Development

The American City Planning movement was an outgrowth of the earlier City Beautiful movement at the turn of the 20th century. Harland Bartholomew was the major influence that brought about the concept and practice of city planning and developed it as a rational discipline that could be taught at the university level. In 1923, the City of Wichita adopted a city plan developed by Harland Bartholomew that established zoning districts and development requirements for each specific to the type of use. Lincoln Heights Addition, platted in 1927, reflected the new subdivision requirements adopted by the city four years earlier. Lincoln Heights Addition has broad streets, traffic circles and triangles that provide small park settings, standards for size of houses built and well-defined front yard setbacks.

This house was built by Walter L. Morris & Son who were residential real estate developers in Wichita. Walter Morris (1860-1951) came to Wichita in 1888. He and his son, William L. Morris (1892-1963), developed Sleepy Hollow, Crestview and Lincoln Heights subdivisions. They platted the Lincoln Heights subdivision in 1927. It is comprised of 14 blocks, restricted to two-story homes. According to a promotional pamphlet published in early 1929, the first home erected was William Morris' home located at 136 S. Pershing. The three houses pictured on page 8 of the pamphlet were 244, 250 and 302 South Terrace. 244 S. Terrace was permitted to Walter Morris on June 15, 1927 at a value of $6,500. 250 S. Terrace was permitted to Adolph Bircher, a Wichita general contractor, on September 28, 1928 at a value of $10,000. 302 S. Terrace was permitted to S.S. Westvold, a Wichita general contractor, on June 9, 1928 at a value of $5,000¹. The house at 248 S. Pershing shown on page 10 of the pamphlet is not found in the City of Wichita Building Permit record (see Lincoln Heights Building Permits Appendix). The building permit records indicate an office for Walter Morris was built there in December 1926. 326 S. Terrace, featured on page 11 of the pamphlet was permitted to W.L. Morris on September 24, 1928 at a value of $4,500. The house featured on page 12 of the pamphlet is actually 344 S. Crestway permitted by Walter Morris on 11-9-1928 at a value of $5,000. Although the building permit file does not account for all houses in the addition, 19 of the permits were issued to Walter or W.L. Morris.

The building permit for the Pryor House is dated April 9, 1928 at a value of $10,000 for the house and garage. Ralph J. Pryor, an independent oil producer, purchased the home and lived there until 1943 when he sold the property to Robert Howse. Mr. Pryor was born in Douglas County, Kansas in 1878 to Mylert and Margaret (Findley) Pryor, pioneer settlers of the state.² He attended the University of Kansas receiving a Bachelor of Arts degree. He married Stella Cornell of Great Bend, Kansas on October 19, 1910. They lived in Dodge City for three years where he sold automobiles. In 1918, he partnered with Floyd Lockhart and successfully drilled wildcat oil wells. Their well operations were principally in Butler, Coffey, Rice and Rush counties with headquarters in Wichita. Mr. Pryor was a member of the Crestview Country Club, affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, the Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks. He was a member of the Tulsa, Oklahoma University Club. He and his wife were members of the First Presbyterian Church of Wichita. Ralph Pryor died August 8, 1963 and is interred at White Chapel Cemetery in Wichita, Kansas. The current owners purchased the property in 1986 and are the seventh owners of the house.

Walter Morris (1860-1951) was born in Sabine, Ohio on March 14, 1860. He came to Wichita in 1888 and was actively involved in real estate and development until his death on July 4, 1951. His real estate firm developed several additions in Wichita including the 80-acre Roosevelt Field Addition (1923), 73-acre Lincoln Heights Addition (1927), 18-acre Sleepy Hollow Addition (1930) and 45-acre Crown Heights Addition (1937).³

William A. Morris (1892-1963) was born August 31, 1892 in Wichita and lived here all of his life. He and his father Walter developed Roosevelt Field, Lincoln Heights, Sleepy Hollow and Crown Heights. He died August 21, 1963 in Wichita, Kansas.⁴

Architecture

Colonial Revival architecture is an interpretation of the earlier American colonial structures executed on a much larger scale with exaggerated architectural details. This style is most prevalent in Wichita's College Hill neighborhood, but may be found in smaller residential structures in Wichita's older neighborhoods. Characteristics of this style often include a pedimented portico that extends above the entrance, classical cornice, wall dormers, broken pediments, asymmetrical façade, brick or clapboard siding, double-hung rectangular sash windows, gabled or hipped roofs, paired or triple windows treated as single architectural units, fanlights and sidelights, pilasters and ornamented door entrances.

The early twentieth century homes built in Wichita were first and foremost "modern" houses of comfort and convenience. Indoor plumbing, built-in gas, electricity, and central heating, all luxuries a few decades before, were now common. A brochure published by Walter Morris & Son Realtors touts Lincoln Heights as "without parallel in character or in opportunity" in an effort to "meet the vital need of a city growing to greatness." Official building permit records of the City of Wichita show a building permit issued to W.L. Morris on April 9, 1928 to construct a residence valued at $10,000.

Wichita's population grew from 52,450 in 1910 to 72,217 in 1920, an increase of 37.7%.⁵ Simultaneously, the Wichita city limits expanded dramatically when the platted size of the city more than doubled between 1909 and 1919. The 1919 map shows outermost boundaries at 21st Street (north), Pawnee (south), Crestway (east), and Gow (west). In all four directions neighborhoods filled with transitional vernacular cottages and early hipped roof bungalows. Elite homes of impressive foursquare design drew wealthy Wichitans to the Midtown and College Hill neighborhoods. Because Wichita is located on the open plains, expansion occurred in all directions simultaneously from the center outward. Local homeowners purchased in whatever neighborhood met their income capabilities.

The 1920s saw booming residential growth in the Delano, Riverside, New Salem, Uptown, and East Front, and College Hill neighborhoods due to an increased demand for middle class housing after World War I. In College Hill many solid, vernacular Foursquare houses mixed with architect-designed Prairie-style houses and the massive stone or brick mansions built for the magnates of Wichita's commerce and industry. Although that neighborhood was originally situated at the outer edge of the city, it is now surrounded by subsequent growth and functions as the ideal for residents of means who do not wish to live in the new and distant suburbs. With its well-tended homes, tree-lined streets and centralized city park, the neighborhood still conveys the atmosphere of propriety that was anticipated by the promoters of the 1920s.

SUMMARY

The Pryor House is eligible for listing under Criterion A Community Planning and Development and Criterion C Architecture as an excellent example of the Colonial Revival style prevalent in Wichita from the 1910s through early 1940s and in the area of community planning and development. Walter and William Morris played a significant role in Wichita's residential development based on platting concepts that were introduced by Harland Bartholomew in the 1923 City of Wichita Comprehensive Plan. Although they developed at least 19 properties in the Lincoln Heights Addition, they sold lots that other contractors built on as speculation or as individuals purchased the lots. Notably A.N. Bontz & Son, G.C. Wright, Adolph Bircher and others as identified in the Lincoln Heights Building Permits Appendix. The property also meets the criteria established in the "Residential Resources of Wichita, 1870-1957" MPD as a building that represents residential housing during the 1920s.
